CHAPTER XXXVII.

TWO weary horsemen on tired horses were slowly riding up the river road just where it entered the Wilton plantation. One was young, a mere boy in years; but a certain habit of command, with the responsibility accompanying, had given him a more manly appearance than his age warranted. The other, to a casual glance, seemed much older than his companion, though closer inspection would show that he was still a young man and that those marks upon his face which the careless passerby would consider the attributes of age had been traced by the fingers of grief and trouble. The bronzed and weather-beaten faces of both riders bespoke an open air life and suggested those who go down upon the great deep in ships, a suggestion further borne out by the faded, worn naval uniforms they wore.

In spite of the joy of springtime which was all about them, both were silent and both were sad. But the sadness of the boy, as was natural, was less deep, less intense, than that of the man. He was too young to realize the greatness of the loss he had sustained in the death of his father and sister, and were it not for the constant reminder afforded him by the presence of his gloomy companion he would probably, with the careless elasticity of youth, have been more successful in throwing off his own sorrow. The man had not lost a father or a sister, but some one dearer still. He looked thin and ill, and under the permanent bronze of his countenance the ravages wrought by fever, wounds and long illness were plainly perceptible. There were gray hairs in his thick, neatly tied locks, too, that had no rightful place there in one of his age. The younger and stronger assisted and watched over his older companion with the tenderest care and attention.

They rode slowly up the pleasant road under the great trees, from time to time engaging in a desultory conversation. Philip endeavored to cheer his companion by talking lightly of boyhood days as each turn of the road brought familiar places in the old estate in view. Here he and Katharine and Hilary had been wont to play; there was a favorite spot, a pleasant haunt here; this had been the scene of some amusing adventure. These well meant reminiscences nearly drove Seymour mad, but he would not stop them. Finally they came to the place where the road divided, one branch pursuing its course along the river bank past the boathouse toward the Talbot place, the other turning inland from the river and winding about till it surmounted the high bluff and reached the door of the Hall. There Philip drew rein.

"This is the way to the Hall, you know, Captain Seymour," he said, pointing to the right. Seymour hesitated a moment and said finally:

"Yes, I know. The boathouse lies over there, does it not, beyond the turn? I think I will let you go up to the house alone, Philip, and I will go down to the boathouse myself. I will ride back presently."

"Well, then, I will go with you," said Philip. "I really think you are too weak, you know, especially after our long ride today, to go alone."

"No, Philip," said Seymour gently. "I wish to be alone for a few moments."

The boy hesitated.

"Oh, very well," he said, beginning to understand. "I will sit down here on this tree by the road and wait for you. I'll tie my horse, and you can leave yours here also if you wish. There is nothing at the Hall, God knows, to make me hurry up there now, since father and Katharine are gone," he continued, with a sigh. "Go on, sir. I'll wait. You won't mind my waiting?"

"No; certainly not, if you wish it. I shall be back in a few minutes anyway. I just want to see the—the—ah—boathouse, you know."

"Yes, certainly. I understand, of course," replied Philip bluntly, but carefully looking away, and then dismounting from his tired horse and assisting Seymour to do the same from his.

"Poor old fellow!" he murmured as he saw the man walk haltingly and painfully up the road and disappear around the little bend.

Left to himself, Seymour stumbled alone along the familiar road over which a few short months before he had traveled light heartedly by the side of Katharine. As he pressed on he noticed a man leave the boathouse and climb slowly up the hill. Desirous of escaping the notice of the stranger, who, he supposed, might be the factor or agent of the plantation, he waited in the shadow of the trees until the man disappeared over the brow of the hill, and then he staggered on. A short time after he stood on the landward end of the little pier, and then his heart stood still for a second and then leaped madly in his breast as he seemed to hear a subtle voice, like an echo of the past, which whispered his name. "Seymour, Seymour!"

Stepping toward the middle of the pier so that he could see the interior of the boathouse through the inner door, his eyes fell upon the figure of a woman standing in the other doorway looking out over the water, stretching out her hands. The sun had set by this time, and the gray dusk of the evening was stealing over the river. He could not see distinctly, but there was light enough to show him a familiar scarlet cloak at her feet, and, although her back was turned to him, he recognized the graceful outlines of her slender figure. It was Katharine or a dream! But could the dead return again? Had the sea given up her dead indeed?

He could not believe the evidence of his bewildered senses. It might be a hallucination, the baseless fabric of a vision, some image conjured from the deep recess of his loving heart by his enfeebled, disordered imagination, and yet he surely had heard a living voice, "Seymour—John—oh, my love!"

Sitting the bentina of his heart, holding his breath even, stepping softly lest he should affright the airy vision, he staggered to the door and stood gazing; then he whispered one word: "Katharine!"

It was only a whisper she heard, but it reached the very center of her being. "Katharine!" he said softly again, with so much passionate entreaty in his wistful voice that under its compelling influence she slowly turned and looked toward the other door from whence the sound had come. Then as she saw him, lifting one hand to her head while the other unconsciously sought her heart, she shrank back against the wall and stared at him in voiceless terror. He dropped unsteadily to his knees, as if to worship at a shrine.

"Oh, do not go away!" he whispered. "I know it is only a dream of mine, so many times have I seen you ever since the night the frigate struck and I sent you to your death on that rocky pass in that beating sea. Aye, in the long hours of the fever—but you did not shrink away from me then; you listened to me say I love you, and you answered." He stretched out his hand toward her in tender appeal. She bent forward toward him. He rose to his feet, half in terror.

"Kate," he said uncertainly, "is it indeed you? Are you alive again?"

She was nearer now. One glad cry broke from her lips. He was in her arms again and she was clasped to his heart—a real woman and no dream, no vision! What the wind could only faintly shadow forth upon her cheek, sprang into life under the touch of his fevered lips, and color flooded them like a wave. Laughing, crying, sobbing, she clung to him, kissed him with little incoherent murmurs, gazed at him, wept over him, kissed him again. All the troubles of the intervening days of sadness and privation faded away from her like a disused chrysalis, and she sparkled with life and love like a butterfly new born.

He that was dead was alive again; he had come back and he was here! As for him, in fearful surprise, he held her to his breast once more, still unbelieving. She noticed then an empty sleeve and raised it tenderly to her lips.

"I lost it after an action with the British ship Yarmouth. It was only a flesh wound at first. We were long in reaching Charleston. The arm had to be amputated. It was a fearful action."

"I know it," she interrupted. "I was there."

"You, Katharine! Ah, that woman on the ship! I was not deceived then, and yet I could not believe it."

"Yes, 'twas I. I gloried in your bravery until I saw you lying, as I thought, dead on the deck. Oh, John, the horror of that moment! Then I called you and you did not answer. Then I wanted to die, too, but now I am alive again and so happy—but for this," she lifted the empty sleeve to her lips. "How you must have suffered, my poor darling," she went on, her eyes filling with tears, her heart yearning over him. "And how ill you look, and I keep you standing here—how thoughtless! Come to the bench here and sit down. Lean on me."

"Nay; but, Kate, you, too, have suffered. See!" He lifted her arm; the loose sleeve fell back. "Oh, how thin it is, and how smooth and round and plump it was when I kissed it last!" he said as he raised it tenderly again to his lips.

"It is nothing, John. I shall be all right now that you are here. You poor shattered lover, how you must have suffered!" she went on, with a sob in her voice.

"Oh, Katharine, this," looking down at his empty sleeve, "was nothing to what I suffered before, when I thought I had killed you!"

"When you thought you had killed me!" she said in surprise. They were sitting close together now, and she had his hand in both her own. "How, when, was that?"

And then he told her rapidly about the loss of the Radnor and the idea which her note had given that she was on board of it.

"And you led that ship down to destruction, believing I was on her! How could you do it, John?" she said reproachfully.

"It was my duty, darling Kate," he said desperately.

"And did you love your duty more than me?"

"Love it? I hated it! But I had to do it, dearest," he went on pleadingly. "Honor—you told me so yourself, here, in this very spot; I remember your words. Do you not recall them? 'If I stood in the pathway of liberty for a single instant I should despise the man who would not sweep me aside without a moment's hesitation.' Don't you know you said that, Katharine?"

"Did I say it? Ah, but that was before I loved you so and you swept me aside. Well, I love you still, and, John, I honor you for it, too, but I could not do it. You see, I am only a woman."

"Kate, don't say 'only a woman' that way. What else would I have you, pray? But tell me of yourself."

Briefly she recited the events that had occurred to her, dwelling much upon Desborough's courage and devotion to her in the first days of her captivity, the death of Johnson, the burning of Norfolk, the death of Bentley. He interrupted her there and would faintly hear every detail of the sad scene over again, thanking her and blessing her for what she had done.

"It was nothing," she said simply. "I loved to do it. He was your friend. It seemed to bring me closer to you." Then she told him of the foundering of the ship, of the frightful voyage in the boat, and rang the changes upon Desborough's name—his cheerfulness, his unflinching zeal and energy—until Seymour's heart filled with jealous pain.

BIG STRIKE GROWS

Stockyards Struggle Develops Into Great Industrial Fight.

HOPE OF PEACE GONE

With Allied Trades Out In Sympathy One of Greatest Strikes In History Is Now On.

Nearly 30,000 Persons In Chicago Alone Are Idle In Consequence of Strike.

Chicago, July 26.—With all peace negotiations broken off, and with all the allied trades unions employed at the different plants, with the exception of the teamsters and the stationery engineers, out on strike in sympathy with the butcher workmen who quit work two weeks ago, the stockyards strike has settled down to what promises to be one of the bitterest fights between capital and labor in the history of America. As has been threatened for some time, the allied trades employed in the packing industry quit work when called on to assist the striking butchers in their efforts to bring the packers to terms. In several instances the men did not wait for the official notification from their leaders to go on strike, but threw down their tools and quit work of their own accord. At 6 o'clock last night the statement was made by Michael J. Donnelly, president of the butchers' union, that every union employed at the stockyards with the exception of the teamsters and engineers, had responded to orders for a general sympathetic strike. The engineers, he declared, would join the strikers today and unless there was speedy settlement of the difficulty, he said the teamsters would undoubtedly join their brother workmen in their struggle for supremacy. According to Mr. Donnelly, the sympathetic strike swelled the number of men who have quit work at the stockyards in Chicago alone to nearly 30,000 persons. Both sides to the controversy declare that they are perfectly satisfied with the present state of affairs and that they are willing to make it a fight to a finish to determine who shall dictate the terms of a settlement.

According to the packers the general strike was a failure, it being claimed by them that not over one-half the members of the allied trades quit work when officially called out by their leaders. The further statement was made by the packers that should all the union men decide to join the strikers it would make little difference to the employers, as they had sufficient resources to contest the ground for an indefinite period. On the other hand, the labor leaders assert that all the union employees at the different packing plants, together with several hundred employees of the Union Stockyards company, quit work in response to the general order for a sympathetic strike.

A new phase of the strike situation developed late yesterday afternoon, when notice was given by the unions to the independent packers at the stockyards that their men would not be allowed to handle animals which had been brought into the yards or handled in any way by non-union men. It is necessary for these independent concerns to take all of their livestock into their yards over Union stockyards runways, where the stock must be handled by non-union men, since the union men employed by the stockyards company in this line of work were among the employees who joined the sympathetic strike.

The ultimatum of the unions leaves the independent packers no alternative but to receive their livestock directly from the country or else close down business entirely. Before peace negotiations had been entirely broken off representatives of the teamsters' union were in conference with the packers in an effort to arrange some sort of a settlement which would prevent a spread of the strike. At this meeting the packers were asked to concede that the first peace agreement, signed last Wednesday and which was later repudiated by the strikers when a second strike was called, be declared null and void and that the packers submit a new proposition for peace terms. The committee also notified the packers that striking butchers would stand by last Saturday's demand, which was that all men be reinstated within ten days or their cases be submitted to immediate arbitration; all butchers and casing men to be taken back within forty-eight hours after work was resumed. No progress towards a settlement was made at the conference, and the teamsters committee retired to consider a new proposal.

Immediately upon the return of the teamsters' committee to union headquarters they entered into a conference with the representatives of the allied trades to consider a proposition submitted to the unions by the representatives of the packers. In the meeting between the teamsters and the packers, the latter offered to change the time of reinstating all the strikers from forty-five to thirty-five hours. They made no concessions other than this, and this proposal was submitted to the allied trades committee. President Donnelly of the butchers' union, however, refused to consider the proposal, and all hope of an immediate settlement was lost.

THE SMILE THAT WINS

Taggart's Chairmanship Seems Now in Easy Reach.

New York, July 26.—The Democratic national committee will pay its respect to the Democratic candidate tomorrow. Arrangements have been made by Norman E. Mack, member of the committee for New York, and Cord Meyer, chairman of the New York Democratic state committee, for the national organization to leave New York at 11:50 a. m. and go direct to Esopus, where each member will be presented to Judge Parker. It is quite probable that the chairman of the committee will be detained at Esopus for a time in order to discuss the plans of campaign and more especially the appointment of the executive campaign committee, which will have the management of the campaign. The members of the committee who have arrived here have confirmed the opinion that Thomas Taggart will be elected chairman. Both William F. Sheehan and Norman E. Mack, who know as much as anybody about Judge Parker's position in this matter, say that Taggart will be chosen. Up to the time that Senator Gorman made it perfectly plain that he would not take the chairmanship, both Sheehan and Mack thought that Taggart might not be elected. The outlook now is that Taggart will be the unanimous choice of the committee.

IN THE FAR EAST

News From the Seat of War Is Scant, but Indicative of Action.

RUSSIANS ARE REPULSED

At Tatche Kiao the Fire of the Japanese Heavy Artillery Drove the Enemy Back.

From Reports at Hand It Appears That 30,000 Russians Were Engaged.

London, July 26.—War news in the newspapers today is most scant, but all reports indicate that the Russians have suffered a serious check in the vicinity of Tatche Kiao.

The Daily Telegraph's Liao Yang correspondent reports that Tatche Kiao was definitely evacuated after a severe engagement which was intended to retard a Japanese flank movement on Liao Yang, but the dispatch does not give the place of the battle nor the date.

The correspondent of the Standard at Tien Tsin reports incessant fighting since Thursday around Tatche Kiao and Kaichau, in which the Japanese were steadily forcing the Russians back. The dispatch from Liao Yang to a news agency here reporting heavy fighting there all of Sunday, it would appear refers to this battle, and from this and other reports it seems that some thirty thousand Russians were engaged and that the battle to a great extent was an artillery duel, no mention being made of a cavalry charge, although the ground is fairly open and level.

Heavy Artillery Fighting.

Liao Yang, July 26.—Heavy artillery fighting occurred near here all yesterday. The Russian casualties, it is alleged, were thought not to exceed 400, while the Japanese are said to have lost more men. The Japanese, who are attacking the "southern detachment," were forced to retire precipitately, leaving their dead and wounded on the field.

A Means to the End.

Tokio, July 26.—The acts of the Vladivostok squadron in the Pacific and of the volunteer fleet in the Red sea, strengthen the belief here that Russia is deliberately seeking to affront America, England and Germany in the hope of finding an avenue for gracefully retiring from a disastrous war.

Render Position Untenable.

New Chwang, July 26.—A fourteen-hours' desperate battle with heavy losses on both sides occurred near here, which resulted in the Russian position at Tatchekiao being rendered untenable, by reason of which they will be compelled to retreat toward Haicheng.

Released the Ardova.

Suez, July 26.—The British steamer Ardova, which was seized by the Russian volunteer fleet steamer Smolensk, has been released and her prize crew has been landed.

The Scandia Proceeds.

Port Said, July 26.—The Hamburg-American line steamer Scandia, which was released by the Russians, has resumed her voyage.

QUESTION OF PROFIT

Cotton-Mill Strike Depends on the State of the Market.

Fall River, Mass., July 26.—The first day of the strike of 25,000 operatives here passed quietly, and so in all probability, will pass the succeeding days for the reason that the opposition to the strike on the part of the owners is so slight as to be hardly a feature.

The mill-owners and their operatives are determined in their positions, and the outcome is hard to predict. With the strikers it is a question of how long they can do without their wages and exist on strike benefits. On the part of the owners it is a matter of how long they can afford to have their mills closed down.

They Want to Know.

St. Louis, July 26.—A committee has been appointed by the national convention of the Lincoln Republican party to interrogate Booker T. Washington, J. Milton Turner and Bishop H. M. Turner, to ascertain which one of them would consent to become a candidate for president of the United States on the Lincoln Republican ticket.

Land Claimants Interested.

Washington, July 26.—Advises received by the commissioner of the general land-office show that the total registration for the Rosebud Indian lands, which ended at 6 o'clock Saturday night, reached 166,326. There are only 2,500 selections to be made. The drawings will take place at Chamberlain Thursday.

Vegetarians Will Flourish.

Racine, Wis., July 26.—Racine is on the verge of a meat famine. There is only meat in the city to last twenty-four hours, and as all the dressed meat comes here from Chicago, the prospect is rather gloomy.

A SIMPLE PROGRAM

No Fuss and Feathers Will Mark the Fairbanks Notification Meeting.

Indianapolis, July 26.—It was learned today that the notification of Senator Fairbanks of his nomination for vice president will be something of a lawn fete. In fact, there will not be much about the meeting except the presence of a number of distinguished politicians to make it look like a political event. In keeping with the senator's ideas, there will be nothing elaborate. The lawn and his home will be decorated with flags, but not profusely. It is the plan now to serve a modest luncheon for the seventy-five or eighty guests of honor who will be present, and maybe a tent will be spread over the lawn for their comfort. There will be no speaker's stand. The senator will sit on his porch and listen to the speeches of Elihu T. Root and other distinguished men who will come to officially tell him he is on the ticket. Then he will take his place among them and deliver his speech of acceptance, which by the way, is expected to prove one of the most interesting contributions to the campaign. Jerry Matthews, the senator's private secretary, said today that the senator will probably arrive in Indianapolis Sunday from Mackinac Island, but that he will return there immediately after his notification.

L. C. Davenport, who was an Eighth district delegate to the Republican national convention, stopped here today en route from New York to his home in Bluffton. He says he spent considerable time on Wall street investigating the political situation among the famous financiers. He was informed, so he declares, that Roosevelt will easily carry New York unless the Democrats appease the Tammany tiger by nominating one of its favorites for governor, in which case they may have a closer call. Davenport met Hetty Green, the richest woman in the world. She inquired about the political situation in Indiana and appeared greatly interested. She seemed especially interested in Senator Fairbanks' candidacy, informing Davenport that she would have been pleased if Fairbanks had been the nominee for president.

In view of the horrible collision on West Washington street last night between a streetcar and a Big Four passenger train it is reasonable to predict that there will be some more track elevation legislation at the coming session of the general assembly unless the city officials can come to some agreement with the railway companies by which the grade crossing dangers can be averted. So many fatal accidents have occurred at the railway crossings here that with this last one the public is liable to get in a humor that may force some kind of protective action. The track elevation bill in the last session was defeated and the railway companies promised that something should be done as soon as possible to remove the grade crossing danger, but as yet there seems to be nothing doing, although from time to time there have been rumors that a plan for elevating or depressing the tracks is about ready. Coroner Tutwiler started an inquiry to determine who is responsible for the wreck last night.

Willis Hickam of Spencer, who was here today, brought some encouraging word to the Democratic leaders regarding the situation in the Second district. The latter is known as the Bryan district. It was the home also of more Populists than any other district. The Republican leaders have naturally figured that the Democratic ticket would lose heavily in the Second because of the radical Bryan men refusing to support Parker, but Hickam says that while there were many threats prior to the St. Louis convention to bolt if Parker were nominated, that this feeling is now rapidly dying out and that the party in the Ninth will be united and harmonious long before election day. He predicted that Congressman Miers will get a large majority and that the state ticket will win without trouble. He said that two years ago the Democrats of the Second were hindered by several bitter local quarrels which have now been settled. Hickam declared that the Democrats of the Second are encouraged at the friendly reception of Parker generally and are ready to get in line and work for him.

Wealthy Farmer Missing.

Newcastle, Ind., July 26.—John F. Williams, a wealthy farmer, left home on the 13th inst., saying he was going to Ingalls, since which time his family has had no tidings of him. There is much speculation over his absence, as it is alleged that he took $4,000 with him.

A Youthful Fratricide.

Urbana, Ohio, July 26.—Chester McCree, aged ten, shot and killed his brother William, aged twelve, near Lewisburg. The boys were at play when Chester became angered and, securing a shotgun, discharged its contents at his brother.

Charged With Kidnaping.

Madison, Ind., July 26.—Ray Mitchell, colored, was held to the circuit court in default of $1,000 bond for attempting to kidnap two little white girls, daughters of Conrad Burkhardt.

Caught at Crossing.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 26.—Henry Young, a gardener, was run over by a Bismarck avenue streetcar and so badly injured that he died a few hours later.

JUDGE Parker is the choice of the tricky politicians; not the choice of the great body of democratic voters.—New Albany Public Press (Dem.)

THERE are now nearly 30,000 of the employers of the Chicago packing houses out on account of the strike. Less than 5000 went to work this morning.

IT is reported that John D. Rockefeller is to retire from active business, but he has enough ahead to keep the wolf from this door if he practices economy during the remainder of his life time.

TAGGART has been the reputed democratic leader in Indiana for a dozen years and at no period in the political history of the state has the republican party gained so steadily in Indiana. The republican plurality will be raised a few thousand again this year.

UP to this time the following National tickets are in the field to be voted for next November: Democratic, Parker and Davis; Republican, Roosevelt and Fairbanks; Prohibitionists, Swallow and Carroll; Socialists, Debs and Hanford; Socialist-Labor, Gorrean and Cox; Populist, Watson and Tribbles; Negro Liberty, Scott and Payne.

IN 1864 August Belmont dictated the Democratic platform and candidate, but McClellan, the nominee, kicked over the platform. He was defeated by an immense majority. This year August Belmont, Jr., dictated the platform and candidate, and again the nominee substituted his views for the platform. History will repeat itself in November, and once more the Rothschilds will mourn over the political success of their financial representatives in New York.—Globe-Democrat.

THE SUBSTITUTE.
Brief Review of the Next Serial Story for Republican Readers.

On Thurs day of this week the REPUBLICAN will begin the publication of its next serial story. In "The Substitute" the critics agree that Mr. Harben has produced his strongest work. It is a graphic story of American life illumined with smiles and bedewed with tears—a story that readers will sit up with at night and talk about the next day. One of the reviewers says of it:

"The Substitute" is vastly superior to anything this gifted author has previously produced. He has the marvelous power to absolutely transfuse and absorb the interest of the reader from the very first line to the end of his story, and this faculty seems to develop to a greater extent in each succeeding book. His long life and intimate acquaintance with everything in the southland gives his stories an air of "at homeness" painfully lacking in some recent books.

Briefly stated, "The Substitute" is the story of the fortunes and misfortunes of George Buckley, a young man of humble birth, but of native fine character, and the scenes are laid in northern Georgia. Buckley received a fine education through the kindness of an old man who, having years before committed a crime, adopted George, intending to so rear and educate him that he would be his moral substitute in the eyes of Providence—therefore the name.

The love interest centers around George Buckley, his rival, Telfare, governor of the state, and Lydia Cranston, the lovely daughter of an old Virginia family living in the neighborhood. All manner of difficulties are thrown in the way of the lovers by Lydia's aristocratic and obstinate parents. They desire her to marry Telfare, who is a political trickster, and a coward to boot, hence not very acceptable to her. George, torn alternately by hope and despair, lives in doubt, fearing to speak on account of his different station in life.

Several highly dramatic scenes occur in the course of the story, particularly a heated conversation between George and Governor Telfare, which takes place in a summer house on the Cranston estate and is overheard by Lydia. A friend of George's in his love for him, "beards the lion in his den" and pulls the governor's ears in his own library. Then George, to protect a friend from murder, holds at bay and disperses a bloodthirsty mob of moonshiners.

The two lovers, however, are finally brought to mutual confession by Lydia's discovery of her mother's deceit in intercepting letters of sympathy written to George while he lay at death's door by reason of a pistol shot received while defending his employer's property from robbery.

NUMEROUS patrons of the local telephone company held a meeting last night and adopted resolutions which are published in another column. The patrons demand better service than has been given and a reduction of rates. In the first place it is unquestionably true that the service is not what it should be. The company should see to it that the service is improved as speedily as possible. The rates charged, in our judgment, are too high. The rates proposed by the patrons strikes us as being reasonable. The present rates are certainly away above the character of the service furnished.

LEESVILLE
Dortha, little daughter of T. T. Wilson and wife, who has been sick for a week, died Monday morning at 4 o'clock. Buried at Shields' cemetery at 10 o'clock Tuesday.

Grace Jones went to Oolitic Tuesday to visit for some time.

Lula Reynolds, who has been visiting her mother here for two weeks, returned home Saturday.

W. N. Hess went to North Vernon Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Colburn and son John and Miss Lela Cousins, of McComb City, Miss., are visiting relatives and friends here.

Coroner Plummer and wife visited at Sparksville Sunday.

William Hill who has been sick for a year, is growing weaker.

Quite a number attended the basket meeting at the Dixon Chapel Sunday.

Quite a number of our young folks attended the ice cream supper at Homer Goen's Friday night.

AT MISS SCHAFER'S GRAVE.
Miss Eva Love Visits the Schafer Family at Elkhart

ELKHART, IND., July 25.—Standing at the grave of Miss Sarah Schafer, the pretty Latin teacher murdered at Bedford last January, Miss Eva Love, who roomed with Miss Schafer, and is supposed to have enjoyed her fullest confidence, yesterday dropped a flower and a tear on the little mound. Miss Love was accompanied by the father and mother of the dead woman.

Miss Love discussed the case very reluctantly. She was the guest over Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. John Schafer, returning today to Valparaiso. They had several close interviews, but the nature of what was discussed was not revealed. Miss Love had not previously met the Schafers.

She denied vehemently the report that she had given Miss Schafer a packet of letters to be opened in case anything happened to her. She disavowed any theory as to the motive of the murder.

Miss Love is now a student at Valparaiso normal and will teach at Bedford again next year, being a very successful teacher. After the untimely death of Miss Schafer, her roommate, the sensational newspapers made free use of Miss Love's name in a manner unjust and wholly uncalled for. The REPUBLICAN was the first paper to interview Miss Love after Miss Schafer's death and therefore knew that these papers were doing her an injustice.

HONEYTOWN
Charles Isaac returned home last Thursday from St. Louis where he has been attending the World's fair.

The nineteenth annual Sunday school celebration will be held at Honeytown next Saturday, July 30. Premiums $20.00 in cash will be equally distributed among the various Sunday schools attending.

FAVORITE AGES OF WOMEN.
They Appear to Range Between Sixteen and Twenty-four Years.

It may seem strange that women have preferences for particular ages. An inspection of the census, however, leaves no room for doubt that certain years are preferred and certain other years disliked by the members of the gentler sex.

Of children fourteen years and under the number of boys is nearly 400,000 greater than the number of girls; at fifteen the boys are still 6,000 ahead of the girls; at sixteen the girls are 6,000 the more numerous, and each year thereafter until the twenty-fourth there is an excess of women over men. The favorite ages within these limits are eighteen and twenty. There are 24,000 more misses of eighteen than there are boys of that age, and the young ladies twenty years old exceed their masculine companions by 54,000. At twenty-four and twenty-five the numbers of the two sexes are nearly equal. Then the women begin to grow less with great rapidity. The most unpopular ages are thirty and forty. At the former age there is a difference of 78,000 between the two sexes; at the latter 83,000.

One peculiar circumstance is that there are more women twenty years old than there are girls of thirteen or fourteen or any age up to twenty. This fact conclusively demonstrates that twenty is a very healthful age. But if the younger ages are unhealthy, where did the increased number who are twenty years old come from? No women are born that old.

Only an unusual elastic theory can account for these peculiarities with becoming gallantry to the lovelier sex.—J. S. Gilliam in Ladies' Home Journal.

YANKEE DOODLE.
The Original Version Dates From the Time of Oliver Cromwell.

The lively strains of "Yankee Doodle" are heard at every patriotic celebration, says a writer in Collier's Weekly, yet perhaps few of those whose pulses stir at the sound of the familiar notes are aware that it dates from the time of Oliver Cromwell and crossed the seas with the Puritans.

"Yankee Doodle" was one of the nicknames bestowed by the Cavaliers on the hated Roundhead, and a verse written upon Cromwell's entry into Oxford, riding on a small horse with a plume twisted into a sort of knot called a "macaroni," runs as follows:

Yankee Doodle came to town
Upon a little pony,
With a feather in his hat
Upon a macaroni.

The transition from Nanke to Yankee—which came from Yengee, the Indian word for English—was very easy, and the Royalists used it as a jeer at all New Englanders.

When the Colonials in Boston, preparing for the coming war, smuggled muskets into the country, concealing them in loads of manure, the Tories sang to the old tune of "Lucy Fisher":

Yankee Doodle came to town
For to buy a firclock;
We will tar and feather him,
And so we will John Hancock.

When the British forces marched to the battles of Concord and Lexington their approach was heralded by "God Save the King," but when the "Yankee farmers" saw the foe in full retreat the strains of "Yankee Doodle" accompanied their flight, and from that hour, wherever the stars and stripes have floated, the once despised tune has been heard.

An Animal Story For Little Folks
An Up to Date Heron

"I'm gettin' rather old," croaked the heron; "that's why I can't catch 'em. My sight is failin' me, and I'm not so quick on the strike as I used to be. Them pesky fish gits away from me every time, and I'm jes' naturally starvin' to death."

"You're right there, old man," said the Yellow Ned as he slipped out of the way of his once terrible beak. "You'll never catch us again. Go off to the woods and die."

Mr. Heron put his head on one side and then on the other. He was thinking. Over across the river a man was fishing.

"I'll see how he does it," said he. "Oh, a line, and a worm at one end and a pole on the other—easy! But, let me see, I have no pole; no, but I have a scheme."

Next day he sat himself on the bank with a long string tied to his long back and a wigly worm tied at one end of the string. He dropped the end of the string in the water. The worm wiggled. Mr. Heron winked one eye and then the other. Pretty soon his head bobbed. "Ah," he cried, "a bite!"

Up went his long neck and up came Mr. Yellow Ned, kicking and struggling at the end of the line. The old heron took him off the hook and hung him on a stick. "Waal," remarked the old bird, as he put on another worm, "I reckon it don't make no difference how yer git yer fish so long as yer git him."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Appropriate.
"It's so long since you sang," said the genial sun to the frozen brook. "I suppose when you get started again you'll babble some old chestnut."

"Jutht tell them that you thaw me," lisped the brook faintly.

Ex-Postmaster Arrested.
Winamac, Ind., July 26.—A. G. Lewark, ex-postmaster at Medaryville, was arrested and brought here to answer a charge of perjury. Some time ago Lewark was held short in his government accounts to the extent of over $900, and his bondsman were required to pay the shortage. Lewark having filed an exemption and escaped payment. It is now claimed that Lewark holds a $2,000 judgment against some property in the Jasper county oil fields and that he failed to list this judgment when he filed the exemption.

Victims of Foul Well.
Warsaw, Ind., July 26.—City Marshal William H. Funk and City Engineer J. V. Goodman were killed by sewer gas in a lift well. Funk descended into the well to inspect the walk. He was soon asphyxiated, crying for help as he became unconscious. Goodman went after Funk, but no sooner reached the bottom of the well than he too succumbed to the gas. The bodies were recovered by use of pike poles.

Packers Circumvent Pickets.
Fort Worth, Tex., July 26.—The strike situation here has been without feature. Pickets have been maintained as usual, but in spite of these the plants have put on 150 new workmen.

A Continuous Snake.
In the Philippines the use of tobacco is universal. The native child acquires the tobacco habit as soon as it is able to walk. In the northern provinces especially it is no uncommon sight to see a child five or six years old puffing vigorously at a big cigar. The women smoke fully as much as the men and commonly smoke cigars where the men use cigarettes. In the northern parts of Luzon immense cigars often a couple of feet long and as thick as the wrist are used. Such a cigar is suspended from a rafter of the house by a string and smoked during the day by all the members of the family as desired.

A Darling Man.
"He's the kind of a man who courts danger, I understand."

"Well, I should say so. Why, he does not hesitate to open a flirtation with any young widow he meets."—Chicago Post.

It adds spice to dreary life, encourages the human heart, lifts one of despair, breathes new life and confidence. That's what Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will do. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets.—W. F. Peter Drug Co.

Republicans to Blame.

The Indianapolis Journal was run last year at a loss of about $300 per day, and yet Republicans over the State, who contributed little or nothing to its maintenance are kicking because it was discontinued. It is too often the case that the people like a paper and feel like they should support and encourage it, but throw little or nothing in the way as a help to support. It costs money every day to run a newspaper, and the people who feel themselves, their business and the city and county are benefited by a paper should not only take the paper, but by patronizing it in other ways, assist in building it up that it may be a stronger and greater influence to help its home community.—Greenfield Republican.

Taggart Elected.

The democratic national committee met at New York today and elected Tom Taggart national chairman. Taggart had the committee pledged before the St. Louis convention and the only way to prevent his election was for Judge Parker to step in and direct otherwise and he could scarcely do that even if he did not want Taggart.

Ladies on all Sides Recognize the Fact

That a new cause for nervous headache has been discovered. Five years ago it was practically unheard of, yet in the past eight months, we have prescribed lenses for several hundred people, ground to suit the individual case which stops the "eye strain," the real cause and nature is permitted to pursue its course without that muscular effort, which gradually wears your life away and makes you prematurely old.

IF YOUR HEADACHES ARE FROM SOME other cause we will gladly tell you free of charge, that you may consult your physician and inasmuch as there is no expense attached, it would seem that every body who suffers with headaches and pains in and around the eye balls would take advantage of Mr. and Mrs. Harsch's free examinations. Good sight is no sign that you are not making an effort to see and that effort causes all the trouble.

PARTING RECEPTION

Tendered Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Martin by Brother Ministers.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Jacka tendered a unique reception last night to Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Martin at their home on north Chestnut street, which was attended by Rev. C. E. Severinghaus, and Mrs. Harley Jackson, Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Sargent, Rev. A. Egli was detained by a previous engagement. The reception was unique in that it was tendered by a minister of one denomination to one of another, and was one of the many evidences of the unusually close and fraternal relations at present existing among the pastors of the city.

The reception was well planned, and ideal in conception and execution. The arrangement of tables, the serving of refreshments, the genial and perfect hospitality, the good taste displayed in speeding the parting guest, the management of the somewhat informal post-prandial speeches by the ladies as well as the men were due to the tactfulness of the host and hostess. Many addresses were made, all of them "with tears in the voice," expression of the esteem in which the departing pastor was held and the regret his brother ministers feel in having him leave Seymour, to which Mr. Martin responded with equal heartiness and regret at leaving associates so congenial.

Found Guilty of Manslaughter

The jury in the murder case of Alvan Oldham, tried at Paoli for killing his uncle, Ephraim Elliott, as a result of a fight with fists, knocking Elliott down on the railway station platform at Orleans, in September last, after a retirement of thirty-seven hours, found the defendant guilty of manslaughter, and he will be committed to the Reformatory under the indeterminate sentence act. Oldham is a nephew of his victim, and the quarrel arose over the sale of property by Oldham's mother, who is a sister of the dead man. Elliott lived but two days after the fight.

Prosecutor John M. Lewis, of this city, prosecuted the case.

The Substitute

BY WILL N. HARBEN

Author of "Abner Daniel," "The North Walk Mystery," Etc.

IN THIS PAPER

The Substitute, by Will N. Harben, the distinguished author's highest achievement and one of the best stories of American life ever written will be printed serially in this paper.

PRAISE FROM THE CRITICS

Decidedly original motive and full of quaint folk portrayed with fidelity. A very human story that makes it a picture of real American life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

"I—killed a feller jest at the close o' the war."

A wholesome, well told story. The plot is fresh, many of the events unfolded come upon the reader as surprises and throughout the story is the racy vigor that results from a deep, true knowledge of the region depicted and the mental grasp to project it.—Literary Digest.

The Substitute is a better book than Mr. Harben's greatly praised Abner Daniel.—Ella Higginson in the Seattle Times.

A sound, wholesome tale of North Georgia life with real raciness and humor and character. It is as good as Mr. Harben's Abner Daniel and that is saying not a little.—Hamilton W. Mabie in The Outlook.
